This property at No 49 Main Street Gorey has been empty for many years; and was sold to McCormack's hardware store.

It was subsequently knocked down to use the space for vehicular access into McCormack's Hardware Yard.

The property previously operated as a public house with different families running it over the years.

One story goes is that Hunter Gowan (of 1798 fame) would drink in this pub; and he would collect his rent here as well; thus it earned the nickname Gowan's Counting House.

The Doyle Family then moved from No 49 Main Street Gorey and purchased a farm out at Bolabradra, Inch, Gorey, County Wexford where they farmed for many years.

Their son Stephen Doyle who was aged 15 in the 1911 census; went on to run a grocer business at 85 Main Street Gorey for many years (now the shop of Boots Chemist).

The Nolan Family of No 49 Main Street.

The Nolan Family came here in the period from 1915 and ran the pub. John Nolan was the publican recorded in the cancellation books.

In later years the building fell into disuse and became derelict and when it was finally sold to McCormack's Hardware Store; they knocked it down to use as vehicle access to the working yard.

The building itself passed into the Crowe Family to a James (Jimmy) Crowe. Jimmy Crowe's mother was previously a Nolan before marriage and a sister to Kathleen Nolan.

Jimmy was reared in the pub by his aunt Kathleen Nolan who took over the running of the pub from her father John.
